Philp, Kasner bring home U15 AA Provincials banner

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle Reporter

The championship banner they won alongside their team may never hang from the rafters in their hometown rink, but Shellbrook's Will Kasner and Caleb Philp are U15 AA Provincial champions, nonetheless.

The pair played the 2025-2026 hockey season with the Prince Albert U15 AA Venice House Pirates, who swept the Engelheim Prairie Storm in two games to be crowned provincial champions on Thursday, April 2.

The Pirates had a strong hockey season from start to finish, going 21-4-2-0 to tie for second overall in the North Division standings. Caleb was instrumental in the Pirates' success, leading the team in scoring with 28 goals and 45 assists over 27 regular season games (2.7 points per game).

Caleb's 73 points were enough for him to place fourth in the SAAHL scoring race.

When the playoffs arrived, Caleb didn't slow down, scoring 11 goals and 11 assists over 8 games (2.75 points per game). This 22-point performance was good enough for him to place second in the playoff scoring race, just one point behind teammate Jordan Labelle.

Caleb's mom, Nicole Philp, says this is the season in a young hockey player's career when the pressure is at its highest, as it's their first draft year for the WHL, the year when they try out for Sask First, and also the year when they try to make the cut at AAA for the following season.

With scouts attending every game and watching every move, it's a lot for a 14 or 15-year-old to handle, and Nicole says Caleb's success stemmed from learning to cope with the pressure, and from taking the opportunity to learn from his coaches and teammates.

"He trains on and off the ice, which has helped him to have confidence and focus during games," she said. "He has worked hard to earn his spot as one of the top players in the province."

With this season's successes, Caleb has signed with the AAA Prince Albert Mintos for the 2026-2027 hockey season. He's also ranked among the top 36 players in Saskatchewan and is still trying out for Sask First. If he makes the cut in September, he'll represent Saskatchewan at next year's Canada Winter Games.

Meanwhile, Will Kasner was a solid presence on the blue line throughout the regular season with 1 goal and 14 assists in 23 games, the second most points for a defenceman on the Pirates' roster. Will really found his game in the postseason, scoring 1 goal and 10 assists over 8 games to finish sixth on the team in points.

Looking ahead to next season, Will's mom, Marliese Kasner, says he'll be keeping his skills sharp by attending a few camps over the spring. After that, it'll be tryouts to see where he lands for the 2026-2027 hockey season.

While Caleb and Will had outstanding seasons, Nicole says the Pirates' Provincials championship comes down to the team as a whole.

"We before Me' was the team motto, and they all learned the value of working hard for the good of the team. And it paid off," Nicole said.

"The Pirates were known as a gritty, hard-working team all season, and it came together for them in the end."

Shellbrook students shine at regional science fair

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle
Reporter

Shellbrook was well represented at this year's Regional Science Fair, which was held at the Science Centre at Prince Albert's Northgate Mall on Tuesday, March 31.

Following a successful showing at Shellbrook Elementary School's Science Fair on March 12, three local experiments, put together by five Grade 5 students, advanced to compete at the larger regional exhibition. Given time to refine and improve their projects, the students impressed the panel of judges and each of their projects earned a placement at the Regional Science Fair.

The Regional Science Fair is a regional level competition where students from Prince Albert and surrounding communities bring their top projects to compete beyond the school and classroom level.

"Following our school science fair, students spent several extra days refining and improving their projects in preparation for regionals, showing tremendous dedication and hard work," said Grade 5 teacher Kalli Pederson.

After placing first in Shellbrook with his hydraulic claw, which was built out of cardboard and used water, tubing, and syringes to move, Zayden Parsons repeated his performance in Prince Albert.

Meanwhile, Shaelyn McAleese and Aubryn Olson improved upon their third-place finish in Shellbrook by placing second at Regionals. With their project, they explored the workings of wind power by building wind turbines to power an entire cardboard box village.

Finally, Hudson Johnson and Jaxson Stene, who placed second in Shellbrook with their investigation of the five second rule, received a third-place distinction in Prince Albert.

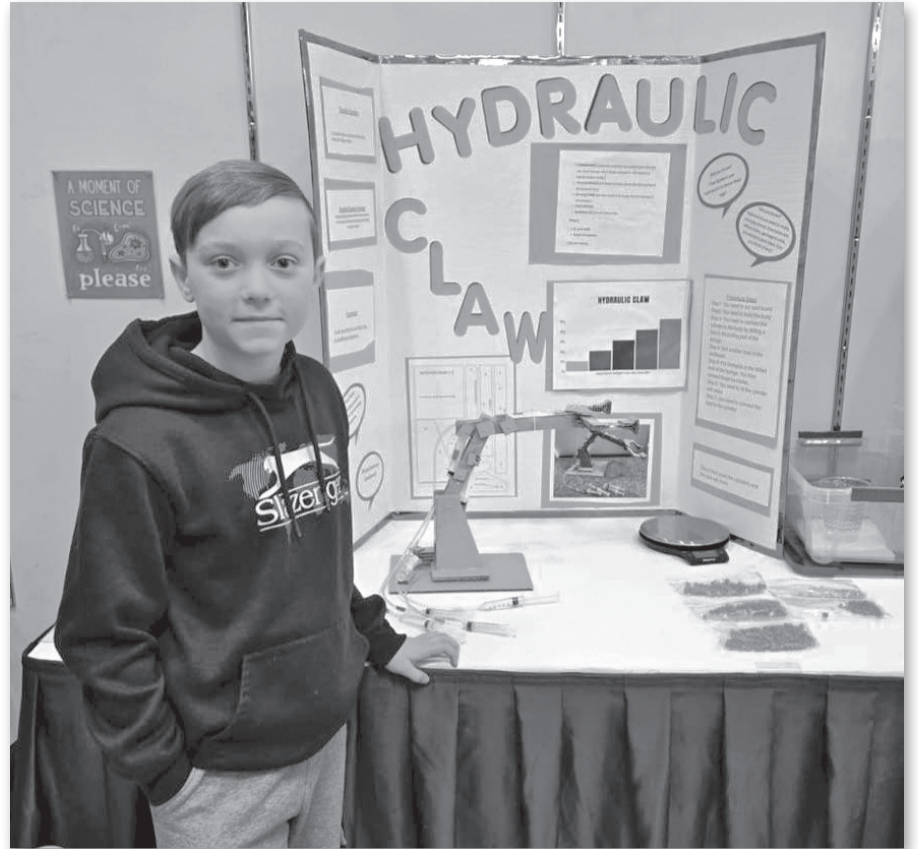

While Grade 7 students have the opportunity to advance to Provincials and Nationals after Regionals, there are no further competition levels for Grade 5 students.

"I am incredibly proud of these students for their effort, creativity, and outstanding representation of Shellbrook Elementary at the regional level," Pederson said.

Pederson revived the Grade 5 science fair at Shellbrook Elementary School because she had fond memories of participating in science fairs when she was in elementary school and wanted her students to make similar memories of their own.

"The science fair is such a valuable experience because it gives students a chance to be curious, creative, and proud of their learning," Pederson said. "Watching them work so hard, solve problems, and then confidently share their projects with others is incredibly special. It helps them see that their ideas matter and that they are capable of amazing things."

Zayden Parsons impressed the judges at the Regional Science Fair and was awarded first place.

Chamber of Commerce warns of business scam

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle Reporter

The Shellbrook Chamber of Commerce is advising local and area businesses to be wary of a phone scam that has been making the rounds in the community in recent months.

The chamber says multiple businesses have been targeted by the scam, which begins with a person calling the business to ask about its services and products.

"They will request a quote be sent to their email and afterwards will call you back and provide a credit card number over the phone," the Chamber said in an email distributed to local businesses.

"The card and payment will be successfully processed and a courier will be sent to your business address to pick up the package to deliver. The courier company sent is a private company and is also a victim of the scam."

A month or two after the transaction, the business will receive a call from the provider of the credit card asking for the money back, leaving the business on the hook to pay the amount of money charged to the provided credit card.

"There is no recourse for the business, as the scammer who provided the credit card number uses a fake name, email, and phone number, so there is no way to contact them," the Chamber said.

The Chamber says the RCMP has been made aware of the scam and is investigating. However, such investigations are difficult.

This isn't the only scam currently making the rounds in Shellbrook. On Monday, April 6, the Shellbrook Seniors Association issued a warning to members about attempted email and phone scams.

"In the email, it stated that the person sending the email knew all the senior's bank account numbers, where he/she lived and all about them. The sender demanded $600 or else he would give out all the senior's private information. The email address it was sent from had elvis@ [followed by] a bunch of odd letters and numbers," the notice read.

The same person who received the fraudulent email also received a fraudulent phone call telling them that they owed money for unpaid speeding tickets.

Shellbrook rec groups hopeful for change

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle
Reporter

Representatives from local recreation and community groups and the Town of Shellbrook gathered in the curling rink lounge on Tuesday, March 31, hoping to find common ground and ways to collaborate to better meet each other's needs.

The Recreation Roundtable, as the Town of Shellbrook has billed it, was the second of what is hoped to be many such meetings in the years to come. Representing the town, CAO Sigourney O'Halligan, Councillors Pam Boettcher, Cheryl Ledding, and Arlette Segberg, and consultant Jim Puffalt spent nearly two hours listening to concerns and answering questions from the 30+ attendees.

First, though, O'Hal-ligan spent a few minutes outlining some recent changes made by the town, including the implementation of a new complaint policy, which clarifies and codifies how complaints are presented to the town and how the town responds to them.

The town is also developing an internal volunteer list, hoping to connect people who want to volunteer with upcoming events in the community that need volunteer help, and establishing user-led committees for sports and recreation and culture. Meanwhile, it continues its search for a sports coordinator, who will serve as a liaison between user groups and the town when communications issues or scheduling issues arise.

"We're hoping to have this ready over the next season, when we have a candidate and a description laid out of how we're going to implement," O'Halligan said of the sports coordinator position.

Going forward, O'Halligan said, the town's focus is on how it can work with the community, strengthen relationships with user groups, and do better.

Taking over, Puffalt, whose firm Prairie Rising is working with the town on its strategic plan, said the first of three pillars of the plan is for the town to build a customer service culture.

"We know that lots of great things happen in the community, but there's also some friction between the town and community groups," Puffalt said. "We want to be here to support community groups... within reason, of course."

When the floor was turned over to attendees, U15 A Parkland Elks coach Kris Moe was first to speak and raise concerns about difficulties he had booking ice time for practices as his team was heading into league finals. In the end, he was forced to move a practice to Canwood, because the town wouldn't provide an ice time that worked for the team.

While Puffalt explained that this was due to short staffing, and said the town is exploring the idea of hiring casual employees to fill gaps in the future, Shellbrook Minor Hockey representative Linda Smith said scheduling was an issue throughout the hockey season.

"I booked roughly 600 hours of ice time in Shellbrook, and roughly 60 hours outside of Shellbrook. There were times where ice was denied," she said, noting that she once had to wait eight days to receive an answer about ice time for a U13 B exhibition.

"With the amount of teams we now have here, we need between 700 and 750 hours of ice time. Is the rink going to be able to be open longer hours than it was this year? This year was not adequate."

Though scheduling was an issue throughout the season, Shellbrook Elks Senior Hockey Club coach Drew Ferster noted the rink sat empty much of the week prior to the meeting, costing the town money while it fought with user groups that wanted ice time. And Shellbrook Minor Ball representative Nicole Philp added that there were also Sundays (prime tournament days) where the rink couldn't be booked due to ice maintenance.

"You can't run a business like that. How are you going to fix it?" Ferster asked, adding that this isn't the first season that this has been a problem.

Puffalt said issues like these are exactly what the town's shift to a customer service culture will address. Ahead of next season, he said, the town will sit down, talk to user groups to determine their scheduling needs, and use this determine how many casual employees it might need.

Further, by establishing a customer service standard, Puffalt said the town will strive to reply to questions within 24 hours (or faster, if it's an urgent matter). The plan is to have this in place by the end of June.

While attendees welcomed this change as a breath of fresh air, the timeline puts it at the end of the upcoming minor ball season. This prompted discussion about the division of responsibilities between the town and user groups, and how accountability is handled when responsibilities aren't met.

"It was in our agreement that the town would spray the diamonds. The diamonds didn't get sprayed in the summer, and were an absolute jungle in the fall," Nicole Philp said. "We have to deal with that this spring. They're not going to be functional. Is it on us to go and pull those weeds?"

Empathizing with this, Puffalt said the town's customer service philosophy will address issues like these, so facilities will be ready for users when they need them.

Another main theme during the evening's discussion was recreation funding. Noting that the community wouldn't exist without recreation and arts and culture, Shellbrook Curling Club representative Paul Beaulieu sought assurances that the town will continue to fund them.

Councillors Cheryl Ledding and Arlette Segberg were quick to offer those assurances.

"We have a very dedicated council that would never let that happen," Councillor Ledding said.

"In every community you have to subsidize recreation," Councillor Segberg added. "We have to look at doing what's best for all of our taxpayers. There's a real balance. But rest assured, there's no question how important recreation is to council."

CHAMPIONS. 🏆🥅❤️

What a season for the Shellbrook Senior Elks. From a rough start going 2-5 in the first 7 games to a 14-game win streak, a battle to the very end, and a championship won in double overtime... it doesn't get much better than that. This team showed grit, heart, and resilience every single night, and we couldn't be more proud.

It's also been so much fun to watch this group truly bond and come together over the course of the season. What started as a team turned into something special, and it showed when it mattered most.

Huge shoutout to our players for leaving absolutely everything on the ice, and to our coaches Drew, Lauren, and Julian for leading the way all season long.

Behind the scenes, none of this happens without our incredible committee, volunteers, front gate workers, and the voice of the Elks, Scott—thank you for everything you all do.

To our sponsors—this season would not be possible without you. Your support goes far beyond the rink, and we are incredibly grateful for your commitment to our team and our community. You play a huge role in everything we accomplish. Thank you for believing in us.

And to our fans... you are truly unmatched. The energy in the rink all season, and especially in that final game, was unreal. We have the best fan base in the league, no question.

This season is one we'll never forget. And we're just getting started.

See you next year. ❤️

Pipeline MOU progress raises cautious optimism

Anyone who has a passing familiarity with government—or worse, has had to deal with a government directly—knows that it tends to move at its own pace.

One might describe that pace as glacial. Though at times, that would seem like an insult to glaciers.

When he became prime minister, Mark Carney promised his Liberal government would change this and do things at speeds not thought possible.

Thus far, his government has certainly tossed a lot of balls in the air. But it's now been a little more than a year since Mr. Carney took office, and we're still waiting for almost all of those balls to drop.

For instance, Mr. Carney has certainly been busy jet-setting and making trade deals with other countries. But with CUSMA negotiations looming on the horizon, trade negotiations with the United States, Canada's largest trading partner, remain strained. While this is mostly because U.S. President Donald Trump has no interest in making a fair deal, Mr. Carney had once promised to reach an agreement by July 21 of last year.

It's these trade tensions that have sent Mr. Carney globetrotting in an effort to reduce Canada's dependence on the U.S. And the strained Canada-U.S. relationship is also a driving force behind Mr. Carney's efforts to repair Ottawa's equally fractious relationship with Alberta through an MOU to build a bitumen pipeline.

Signed last November, the MOU doesn't guarantee construction of a pipeline tomorrow, or even 10 years from now.

Instead, it outlines the emissions and other climate conditions and timelines that need to be met in order for a new oil pipeline to the Pacific to be approved under Mr. Carney's major projects law.

These conditions include Alberta signing on to an industrial carbon pricing agreement to lower methane emissions by 75 per cent over the next 10 years, and the federal government

JORDAN TWISS
News Editor

axing the Trudeau era oil and gas emissions cap and making adjustments or exemptions to the federal oil tanker ban off the coast of B.C.

The MOU also includes commitments from both governments to achieve net-zero emissions by 2050, and to engage with the government of British Columbia and B.C. First Nations to "ensure they share in the financial benefits" of any pipeline project.

Last, but certainly not least, the MOU identifies four potential projects:

- Construction of one or more private sector constructed and financed pipelines, with Indigenous co-ownership and economic benefits, in addition to the expansion of the Trans Mountain pipeline;
- Constructing and financing Pathways, the world's largest carbon capture, utilization, and storage project;
- Construction of thousands of megawatts of AI computing power, with a large portion dedicated to sovereign cloud for Canada and its allies; and
- Construction of large transmission connections with B.C. and Saskatchewan to strengthen the ability of the western power markets to supply low carbon power to oil, LNG, critical minerals, agricultural, data centres, and CCUS industries in support of their sustainability goals.

Amid all these conditions and commitments, four pieces of the MOU were given April 1 deadlines: the aforementioned methane emissions agreement, an agreement to give Alberta greater jurisdiction over project approvals, an industrial carbon pricing agreement, and a trilateral agreement with the Oil Sands Alliance (formerly known as the Pathways Alliance) on a 400-kilometre carbon capture and storage network.

In the four months since it was signed, the MOU has faced much skepticism—mostly from those who doubt Mr. Carney's commitment to seeing a pipeline built.

Despite this, Mr. Carney and Alberta Premier Danielle Smith met the April 1 deadline for the methane and project approvals—an impressive feat, given how slowly governments move.

This leaves only the agreements on carbon pricing and the carbon capture and storage network outstanding.

Regarding carbon pricing, the only sticking point is the speed at which Alberta will raise its industrial carbon price to $130 per tonne.

"We don't want to raise it so quickly in this environment that it ends up having the exact opposite impact of driving away investment when we're trying to drive all that investment here," Ms. Smith said last week, expressing optimism that she and Mr. Carney will soon settle on the same timeframe.

Meanwhile, for the carbon capture and storage network, the Oil Sands Alliance says it needs more government incentives to proceed.

Even as these two elements of the MOU remain to be negotiated, Ms. Smith says her government plans to submit its application for a million-barrels-per-day bitumen pipeline to the B.C. coast by June, with the hope of getting the pipeline operational by 2032.

When the MOU was signed, the prospects of a private sector player stepping up to the plate to build a pipeline looked pretty grim.

Oil prices were sitting at $60 per barrel, and some analysts projected that they could drop as low as $30 per barrel by 2027.

Prices that low would have made a pipeline financially infeasible. But conveniently for oil companies (and inconveniently for consumers), President Trump's senseless war in Iran, and the resulting blockade of the Strait of Hormuz, have some analysts projecting oil prices could soar to $200 per barrel.

Suddenly, the economic case for a pipeline seems a lot stronger. But, of course, a plan and a route still need to be proposed, and a private sector proponent needs to step forward to take on the project.

If the Oil Sands Alliance's push for "more government incentives" on carbon capture and storage is anything to go by, it's this last piece, not slow-moving government, that will hold up Alberta's prospective pipeline.

Though oil companies have continuously set production and profit records in recent years, it's clear that they expect Canadian taxpayers to foot the bill for them yet again.

Canwood students stage dessert theatre

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle
Reporter

Canwood Public School students in Grades 7 to 12 staged a deliciously funny pair of one-act plays during their Dessert Theatre performance on Tuesday, March 31.

With 14 students in junior drama (Grade 7 to 9) this year, the play selected was Complaint Department and Lemonade by Kamron Klitgaard, a series of rapid-fire scenes in which the employees of a beleaguered Complaint Department must deal with some questionable complaints, including grievances about Ore icing and songs that get stuck in your head.

Meanwhile, there were 11 students in senior drama (Grade 10 to 12) this year, performing Fairy Godmothers in Training by Kendra Thomas. The play follows a pair of Fairy Godmothers in training who have to deal with a growing pile of wishes left behind by their mentor (who's enjoying her retirement a little too much to complete their training).

Amidst the humorous hijinks on stage, the audience was also treated to tasty desserts prepared and served by Canwood Public School's commercial cooking class, under the supervision of Mr. Duvall and Ms. Stefankiw.

Drama coordinator Kori Sansom says this year's productions were selected based on the number of students involved, and because they allowed for smaller practice groups and simpler staging. With rehearsals only beginning at the end of January, Sansom says she was very pleased with how the students did on show night.

"Our evening performance went very well," she said. "Students worked really hard to make sure they knew their lines and their cues and there were lots of laughs in both plays."

Sansom says drama is important because it helps kids build their self-confidence and find strength in themselves that they can then apply to other areas of their lives. As drama is very much a "team sport," it also provides a sense of community for both the cast and crew.

"It's hard to get up on stage in front of an audience, but drama allows you to do that and even be silly and have fun without the fear that goes with it because you're just playing a character."

The students' growing self-confidence was on full display during the senior drama production, when two lights came crashing down and the rest of the lights went out. Rather than panic, the actresses on stage finished the scene as if nothing had happened.

Once the scene was complete, the stage crew leapt into action to fix everything and get the show going again.

"[Drama] brings kids together where they have the confidence to do what needs to be done, work together with anybody and at the end of it they were all laughing about the situation and will have a memory that will last for a lifetime," Sansom said.

"To me, that's what drama is about."

Proceeds from the Dessert Theatre production go towards paying for production costs, including the costs of the desserts, costumes, makeup, and more.

Shellbrook Arts Council seeks to revitalize

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle Reporter

It's often said that Shellbrook wouldn't exist without recreation. But for her part, Shellbrook Arts Council member Tracy Azevedo believes that arts and culture have an equally important role to play in keeping a community alive.

For the past 70 years, the Shellbrook Theatre has been at the heart of arts and culture in the community and the broader region. Joined by six other Arts Council members who share her vision and ambition, Azevedo hopes to revitalize arts and culture in the community and see this legacy carried on for generations to come.

"Communities that play together stay together. We believe arts and culture and recreation are at the heartbeat of any thriving community," Azevedo said, noting that families are drawn to communities with arts, culture, and recreation programming.

"Studies show that arts and culture are a contributing factor to mental and emotional health and wellbeing, and to creativity and a strong sense of self within a community. Enjoying and engaging in that is good for the soul of a person and the soul of a community."

Part of revitalizing not only the community's arts and culture offerings, but also the Arts Council itself, is bringing new people and ideas to the table, whether it be as members or simply volunteers. To this end, Azevedo says anyone is welcome.

"People think they have to be artistic to become part of the arts council. That's just not the case," she said. "There's so much need and room for all who have an interest in just creating a thriving community of arts and culture."

The other key to revitalizing local arts and culture is giving people more opportunities to enjoy and engage with them. With the upcoming launch of its 2026-2027 Performing Arts Series Showcase — coinciding with W.P. Sandin High School's Regional Drama performance at the Shellbrook Theatre on Thursday, April 16 — the Arts Council is planning to do just that.

The series will bring exceptional musical talent to Shellbrook, with concerts by The Johner Brothers and husband and wife folk duo Burnstick, as well as a show by a grand illusionist.

Elsewhere, blending theatre and music, a production of Tomatoes Tried to Kill Me but Banjos Saved my Life will tell the true story of Keith Alessi, who quit his corporate life after a cancer diagnosis to pursue a passion for playing the banjo.

"All artist proceeds from [Tomatoes Tried to Kill Me but Banjos Saved my Life] are coming back into the community to further the renovations of the theatre and support the community in connecting through the arts," Azevedo noted.

For more information on the Shellbrook Arts Council and its plans, visit the organization's new website when it goes live on April 16: www.shellbrookartscouncil.ca.

Auction highlights strength of cattle market

There is typically a feeling at an auction sale that is just a little different.

Maybe it's the social aspect of such gatherings — friends and neighbours coming together to talk about a variety of things over a cup of coffee, most not necessarily related to whatever is being sold that day.

Maybe it's that an auction is perhaps the ultimate way to determine the value of whatever is being sold, at least in the minds of those attending. If you want what is being sold, you can bid until such time you no longer deem it worth what some other bidder is willing to pay.

And sometimes it's just the general energy which seems to permeate some auctions that is infectious.

That was certainly how I would describe the atmosphere of the 'Best of Breeds Bull Sale' I popped into at Heartland Livestock in Yorkton Sunday.

Of course, it's rather easy to be upbeat about the cattle sector right now, and be in a generally good mood if you have a herd of animals back on the ranch.

When auctioneer Chris Poley started the sale by noting how cull bulls could bring 5, 6, or 7,000 dollars, depending of course on weight, you could almost see the eyes sparkling among the buyers.

And then Poley added that a steer might bring $4,500, and I started doing the rough math, which suggested the cattle sector was as strong as it's ever been.

But Poley then suggested there seems room for still higher prices ahead.

Then the sale starts and the first bull in the ring starts drawing bids. Three ring men start hollering the bids they see, and the price climbs over $10,000, then beyond $20K, finally having Poley drop the gavel as sold at more than $30,000.

The next two bulls go for more than $20,000 apiece.

There is an energy that is near electric.

While not the crazy high prices this reporter recalls from early Agribition sales when new European breeds were arriving — Simmental, Salers, Chianina — and sales were sky high based in part on speculation and the expectation the new breeds would change the industry. Some would effectively change things, others would all but disappear, but for a time sales were crazy.

The sale Sunday was not that extreme, but it had an energy based on the grassroots producer enjoying markets which have never been so high.

And that means an ability to add the best in genetics to continue to develop a herd's foundation as a base for when prices do decline — and of course they will as markets rise and fall in a never ending cycle.

But for today, prices are high and the bull sale was electric as a result.

Government welcomes emergency strychnine approval

By MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE
Submitted

The Governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta received approval for a revised joint Emergency Use Request for the use of two per cent liquid strychnine to support integrated pest management of Richardson's ground squirrels (RGS).

The revised request was submitted last week to Health Canada's Pest Management Regulatory Agency (PMRA) following close collaboration between both provinces and the federal government. The revised request included additional stewardship measures and environmental safeguards to support responsible use.

"Saskatchewan producers have been clear about the challenges they face in managing gophers with the limited tools currently available," Agriculture Minister David Marit said. "We are pleased to see the emergency use request granted as a practical opportunity for producers to demonstrate how strychnine can help protect their crops and pastures from continued damage. We hope to see strychnine reinstated permanently in the future as a tool producers can use to manage gophers."

Under the Emergency Use Registration authorized through the Pest Control Products Act, areas in approximately seven crop districts in southwest, southeast, south central and northwest Saskatchewan will be eligible to access strychnine. These areas were identified using Saskatchewan Crop Insurance Corporation claims data and information related to species at risk presence.

"The Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities (SARM) has been calling for a practical solution on strychnine for a long time, so today's announcement is a significant win for our members," SARM President Bill Huber said. "SARM will continue to work with governments and producers to ensure this tool is used responsibly and effectively."

The revised Emergency Use Registration includes measures to protect species at risk, including a refined geographic scope, increased monitoring and carcass collection and disposal requirements and enhanced mandatory training.

The federal authorization allows strychnine to be registered for use in Saskatchewan and Alberta until November 2027, subject to all PMRA conditions. Saskatchewan will continue to support producers, including those outside of areas eligible for strychnine, through extension efforts, the Gopher Control Program and Saskatchewan Crop Insurance Corporation programs.

"We applaud the government for hearing producers' concerns and pushing forward with a common sense, made-in Saskatchewan solution to the ongoing gopher infestation," Saskatchewan Stock Growers Association President Jeff Yorga said.

Sask. enhances farm stress help line

By MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE
Submitted

As of April 1, SaskAgMatters Mental Health Network Inc. will manage the Farm Stress Line as part of a coordinated mental health support system for Saskatchewan producers, their family members and their employees. The new partnership offers 24/7 confidential access to crisis line counsellors trained in agriculture, as well as follow-up counselling sessions with Saskatchewan-based registered mental health professionals with backgrounds in agriculture.

The Government of Saskatchewan and Government of Canada are providing $200,000 per year for the next two years for the Farm Stress Line and counselling services through the Sustainable Canadian Agriculture Partnership (Sustainable CAP).

"Farmers withstand unique demands and challenges that affect not only their physical health, but also mental well-being," Federal Agriculture and Agri-Food Minister Heath MacDonald said. "This partnership ensures that when members of our agricultural community reach out, they are connected with a mental health professional who truly understands their reality."

"People working in agriculture face stressful work conditions affecting their livelihood and wellbeing," Agriculture Minister David Marit said. "They need support from mental health professionals who understand the industry and who will ensure confidentiality for those who reach out. The Farm Stress Line has a proud history of supporting the agricultural community, and these improved services will help protect the health of people working in the sector."

The Farm Stress Line toll-free number - 1-800-667-4442 - will stay the same. Producers can call about anything affecting their wellbeing, including financial stress, family pressures, anxiety, depression, burnout or concern for someone else.

SaskAgMatters is a Saskatchewan-based organization of producers and mental health professionals. The organization is enhancing its local counselling services through a partnership with the Canadian Centre for Agricultural Wellbeing to provide crisis support services from counsellors with agricultural training through the National Farmer Crisis Line.

"SaskAgMatters was founded to break down the barriers that Saskatchewan farm families face when trying to get help," SaskAgMatters board chair and co-founder Cynthia Beck said. "We have removed the time and stress involved in finding a mental health professional and cover the financial cost of these services. Our counsellors offer flexible appointment times and will meet by telephone or virtually."

"Through our research, we listened to Saskatchewan farmers and ranchers," Associate Professor, College of Nursing, University of Saskatchewan, and co-founder of SaskAgMatters Dr. Michelle Pavloff said. "Their experiences guided this new approach to mental health support, including a refreshed Farm Stress Line and access to therapy provided by those who understand agriculture, either through lived experience or training. This work was built with producers, and we are proud to be advancing farmer mental health in Saskatchewan."

Sustainable CAP is a five-year, $3.5 billion investment by federal, provincial and territorial governments to strengthen competitiveness, innovation, and resiliency of Canada's agriculture, agri-food, and agri-based products sector. This includes $1 billion in federal programs and activities, and a $2.5 billion commitment that is cost-shared 60 per cent federally and 40 per cent provincially for programs that are designed and delivered by provinces and territories.

Leask Legion donates to Wheatland Lodge

By VALERIE PRIESTLEY
Leask Legion

The Leask Legion Branch #79 recently donated a Broda Chair, valued at $4,600, to Wheatland Lodge.

After contacting the staff of Wheatland Lodge, it was decided that this chair would help to make the lives of the residents and staff more enjoyable. This chair assists staff to move residents within the facility who are no longer capable of being in an ordinary wheelchair.

This year is the 100th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Legion and it is also the 100th anniversary of the Leask Legion. In commemoration of this milestone, the membership decided to make this donation to Wheatland Lodge.

Money used for this donation came from the many soup & sandwich luncheons and 50/50 ticket sales the Legion has hosted, with support coming from Leask, Marcelin, Blaine Lake, and the surrounding communities.

The Leask Legion's mandate as a branch of the Royal Canadian Legion is to support veterans, promote and contribute to community events through donations, promote the education of youth regarding Remembrance Day, the contributions of veterans, and the purpose of Legion organizations, and support youth in literary, artistic and sporting events.

The Legion is always looking for new members to support us in these endeavours. Anyone can join the Legion. The only requirement is that you pledge to uphold the mandate of the Legion.

In celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Legion, new members who join this year will receive free membership for 2026.

Debden Library hosts digital storytelling seminar

By ALINE HANNON
Branch Librarian

A "Pull Up a Log" workshop was recently held at the Debden Library. This engaging series was offered primarily in French (with a little English) by Radio-Canada in partnership with the library.

Over four sessions, participants learned how to transform their personal anecdotes into digital stories—short videos created using their own voices, words, and photographs. The experience was stimulating, fun, and deeply reflective.

The workshop was led by Nicole Lavergne Smith, a video journalist, and Brittany Warren, an associate producer with ICI Saskatchewan.

Once the editing process is complete, the group will gather one final time in May for a special presentation. This event will offer family, friends, and community members a chance to come together and view the finished projects.

The Debden Library partnered with Radio-Canada on a digital storytelling seminar, guiding participants in turning their stories into short videos.

Shellbrook line dancers conclude winter season

By DIANE CLEMENTS & RHONDA MARTIN
Instructors

The Shellbrook Line Dancers completed their winter season on Monday, March 30.

From October to March, drop-in sessions were held weekly at the Shellbrook Senior Centre on Monday mornings for participants aged 18 and up. Classes were offered for two levels: absolute beginners and beginners.

By the end of March, those who had participated in the absolute beginners had progressed successfully to the level of the beginners, and on March 30, both groups combined for a final dance and social.

It was a great way to end the season with a lot of fun and socializing through dance!

Shellbrook's line dancing students gathered on March 30 for one last day of dancing, socializing, and fun.

Shellbrook Library activity highlights

On Wednesday, March 18, Lucille Scott gave a presentation at the library about her trip to Costa Rica in 2016. She showed attendees pictures and videos of her trip. Lucille and her younger sister saw Liberia, the village of Playa Hermosa, and Playa Coco.

They viewed unique sights, such as the Arenal Volcano/hot spring, hanging bridges, hummingbird and blue morpho butterfly sanctuaries, a white-throated magpie jay, Brazilian Brahman, an iguana, a lipstick plant, coffee fields and a rodeo in Liberia.

On Friday, March 27, Manny Kaur from Prince Albert Mobile Early Learning came to the library to present The Very Hungry Caterpillar storytime workshop. There were 6 kids and 5 adults who attended the program.

Manny brought a match-up & sequencing sensory bin, a St. Patrick's Day look & find bin, and a paper mosaic rainbow art kit. There were different stations set up throughout the library.

Participants did sponge painting on a butterfly picture, made Play-Doh balls and flattened them with a rolling pin, played with magnetic blocks and panels, played with clip connect interlocking solid plastic building blocks, and sorted shapes by putting them into the correct opening in a wooden box.

U15 A Parkland Elks exceed coach's expectations

By JORDAN TWISS
Shellbrook Chronicle Reporter

Most hockey coaches begin the season with hopes of taking their team all the way to a championship banner. But as Kris Moe's U15 A Parkland Elks embarked on their inaugural regular season, his hopes for his team were more modest.

"Our hopes were just to ice a competitive team," he said. "I wasn't expecting to win league or go for a good provincial run, but that happened. They far exceeded my expectations."

When Moe created the U15 A Parkland Elks and joined the Tri-City Hockey League, a relatively new league founded by the cities of Prince Albert, Meadow Lake, and North Battleford, his goal was to offer a program that allowed players to compete at a higher level and prepare themselves for the U18 AA Parkland Elks program.

As its regional designation implies, the U15 A Parkland Elks team drew its players from a 120-kilometre radius surrounding Shellbrook. And joining Moe behind the bench for the first season were assistant coaches James Fraser from Big River and Jason Hauber from Cudworth, and manager Riann Fraser.

The team also received support from the U18 AA Parkland Elks, which ran player evaluations alongside Dave Philp. Additionally, U18 AA Elks assistant coach, Brad Rock, came out to run some practices and help with player development.

With this groundwork laid early in the season, Moe says his team started off very competitive, before leveling off midseason. Hoping to light a fire under the team, Moe started holding more practices.

This helped the team come together, and a tough, one-goal loss to Biggar in Provincials proved to be a catalyst for the team's league play as it headed into playoffs.

"We had a couple leaders step up and start leading the team," Moe said. "As a group of kids, they all got along. There was no negativity on the bench. They're all friends. They were all working hard, and they were all working toward the same goal."

The team began the postseason by overcoming a stiff challenge from the Meadow Lake Stampede, then earned its place in the league finals by besting the Prince Albert Hurricanes.

Drawing the Liteway Electric Tornados as their opponent, the U15 A Elks put on a dominant display to end their first season with a championship banner.

"At the end of the day, we outshot them, we outworked them, we outplayed them. We just wanted it more than they did, and we came out on top," Moe said.

"Watching the team you put together in September come so far and be able to hang a banner this year, it was just unreal. It says something about our program, and the program will continue."

While the U15 A Elks program will continue, with a handful of players returning to the team next season, what is less certain is Moe's role in the team. With a son moving up into U18 and another coming up into U15, it will depend on what level they end up playing at.

Whatever happens, though, Moe says he'll be involved with the program in some fashion.

Sask. transfers mineral rights to Mistawasis

By MINISTRY OF GOV'T RELATIONS
Submitted

The Government of Saskatchewan has approved the transfer of additional Crown mineral rights to the Government of Canada on behalf of Pasqua First Nation, Flying Dust First Nation and Mistawasis Nêhiyawak in support of their Treaty Land Entitlement agreements.

The province has approved the transfer of approximately 333.5 hectares (824.1 acres) of Crown mineral rights for Mistawasis Nêhiyawak. This marks the first transfer of Crown mineral rights under the Mistawasis Nêhiyawak Treaty Land Entitlement Settlement Agreement.

For Flying Dust First Nation, the province has approved the transfer of approximately 17.1 hectares (42.3 acres) of Crown mineral rights. This latest transfer brings the total Crown mineral rights approved for transfer under the Saskatchewan Treaty Land Entitlement Framework Agreement for Flying Dust First Nation to approximately 5,640 hectares (13,940 acres).

For Pasqua First Nation, the province has approved the transfer of approximately 64.4 hectares (159.1 acres) of Crown mineral rights. This latest transfer brings the total Crown mineral rights approved for transfer under the Pasqua Band Treaty Land Entitlement Settlement Agreement to approximately 1,590 hectares (3,930 acres).

"Treaty Land Entitlement is an important part of our shared responsibility to honour Treaty commitments in reserve land allocations," Minister Responsible for First Nations, Métis and Northern Affairs Eric Schmalz said. "Each transfer helps create long-term opportunities for economic growth that benefit First Nations and communities across Saskatchewan."

The Ministry of Government Relations works closely with Entitlement First Nations and the Government of Canada to implement the reserve creation process in accordance with Treaty Land Entitlement agreements. Saskatchewan continues to support Treaty Land Entitlement through land and mineral transfers that contribute to reconciliation and economic development across the province.

It's officially spring: Masters week is here

For many casual sports fans, this is the week they start paying attention to golf. It's Masters Week at Augusta, Ga., and this year's edition offers up a number of intriguing questions. Such as:

Considering the last two Players' champions went on to win the Masters in the same year (Scottie Scheffler in 2024; Rory McIlroy in 2025), should the Green Jacket tailors seek Cameron Young's measurements and get an early start?

Did the recent traffic accident suffered by Tiger Woods officially eliminate any chance that he would one day make a comeback at the Masters, where he has won five times?

Will a golfer playing in the Masters for the first time win in his debut, joining the late Fuzzy Zoeller in 1979 as the first player to do so since 1935?

Is it true that CBS pipes in recorded bird-chirping sounds during their broadcasts?

Do patrons (as fans are called in the hoity-toity world of Augusta National) really get kicked off the course if they're caught running?

If not Scheffler or McIlroy, the two favorites to win almost every Masters, who will be crowned champion on Sunday?

Perhaps one of the young guns who have been who have been showing their talent during the first few months of the 2026 season, like Jacob Bridgeman, Akshay Bhatia, Chris Gotterup or Ludvig Aberg?

How about another Canadian winner, joining 2003 champ Mike Weir?

Who would be the most logical Canuck to win this year? — Corey Conners, Nick Taylor or Weir — the only Canadians in the field?

Is four top 10s in the last six years evidence enough to suggest Conners would be Canada's best bet?

Will the PGA Tour's youth movement — eight of the first 11 tournaments in 2026 were won by golfers in their 20s — continue at Augusta National?

Would 20-something Akshay Bhatia, a left-hander on a course made for lefties, look good in a Green Jacket?

How long can the Masters committee continue to sell its famous pimento cheese sandwich for $1.50, the same price it has been since 2002?

Is the best hole on the course, the par-5 13th that has Rae's Creek running in front of it, becoming outdated now that the game's big hitters are going into the green with a lofty iron for their second shot?

While Augusta National Golf Club is flush with millions of dollars today, and the tournament generates around $150 million annually, did you know that the club's financial situation was so dire in the 1930s that 17 members had to chip in to cover the purse to pay its first winner, Horton Smith?

Did you know that off the four major golf championships, the Masters is the only one to use the same course every year?

Will attending the Masters, for even one day, be one of this writer's bucket list items that will never be realized?

• Super 70s Sports: "I wish John Daly had won the Masters just once so we could've seen his Champions Dinner menu ...Appetizers: Cigarettes and gas station nachos; First course: Bucket of casino shrimp; Main course: White Castles; Dessert: Peanut M&M's."

• Comedy guy Torben Rolfsen of Vancouver, suggesting the replacement for NHL commissioner Gary Bettman be a Canadian: "Radical, I know. That's like putting a German in charge of Oktoberfest."

• Tampa Bay Lightning coach Jon Cooper, on the secret to success of an NHL coach: "My wife (Jessie) sums it up in three things: Having an understanding wife, a loyal dog and one hell of a goalie."

• Comedy guy Torben Rolfsen of Vancouver: "The NHL announced the draft lottery would be held May 5, Cinco de Mayo. Or in the Canucks' case, Sinkhole de Mayo."

• Headline at fark.com: "Tiger Woods driving skills: World class on the fairway, terrible on the road-way."

• Janice Hough of leftcoastsportsbabe.com: "Have to ask. Has Trump presumptively pardoned Tiger yet?"

• Humorist Brad Dickson of Omaha: "According to the National Transportation Safety Board 20 percent of all vehicle accidents in the United States in the past five years involved Tiger Woods."

• Jack Finarelli of sportscurmudgeon.com, after reporting that Phillies' Alec Bohm is suing his parents for defrauding him and mismanaging his money (career earnings $27 million): "Don't worry about passing the cranberry sauce in late November here ..."

• Headline at the on-ion.com: "Office NCAA Bracket Marks Yearly Interaction With Coworkers"

• Another fark.com headline: "The Pope's favourite baseball team opens the season with a 14-2 beatdown by the Brewers. The White Sox don't have a prayer, do they?"

• Steve Simmons of the Toronto Sun: "How much has Mitch Marner made the Vegas Golden Knights better? This will be the first season in Knights history where the franchise loses more games than it wins."

Sask. RCMP highlights SERT's efforts

By SASK RCMP
Submitted

Saskatchewan RCMP's Saskatchewan Enforcement Response Teams (SERT) continued to make significant strides in combatting organized crime and apprehending high-risk offenders in 2025, removing large quantities of illicit drugs and dangerous weapons from communities across the province.

Saskatchewan RCMP's SERT is a province-wide network of specialized, intelligence-led police units that support front-line officers at RCMP detachments. The units target the individuals and criminal groups driving violence and drug trafficking in Saskatchewan. Saskatchewan RCMP's SERT includes five units: the Crime Reduction Teams (CRT), Human Trafficking and Counter Exploitation Unit (HTCEU), Offender Management Unit (OMU), Saskatchewan Trafficking Response Team (STRT), and Warrant Enforcement Suppression Team (WEST). These units — supported by 106 RCMP officers and 27 public service and civilian employees — are based in 10 communities across Saskatchewan and deploy throughout the province in response to emerging threats.

Enforcement highlights from 2025

In May, SERT officers intercepted methamphetamine during a traffic stop that field-tested positive for fentanyl contamination. Two adults were arrested, and provincial partners with the Saskatchewan Ministry of Health issued a public drug alert to warn residents of the heightened risk in the area.

In October 2025, SERT assisted Turtleford RCMP in an apprehension operation. Through targeted enforcement and detachment intelligence, officers arrested 10 individuals wanted on outstanding warrants during the four-day operation, directly improving safety in the region.

Later that same month, SERT units in North Battleford were executing a search warrant at a residence when a firearm was pointed at an officer. As a result of investigation, two males were arrested, five firearms and cocaine were seized, and 40 charges were laid, preventing further violence and reducing safety risks to both the public and police.

In December, a joint investigation between Saskatchewan RCMP's SERT and Prince Albert Police Service's CRT resulted in the seizure of 3.9 kilograms of cocaine, 4.8 kilograms of methamphetamine, and six firearms from a residence and vehicle in central Saskatchewan. Criminal networks often operate across detachment, jurisdictional, and provincial borders, making this one of many investigations where Saskatchewan RCMP's SERT collaborated with other provincial partners to combat violent crime.

SERT's 2025 Results

In 2025, Saskatchewan RCMP's SERT units:

- executed 765 arrest warrants, removing wanted offenders from Saskatchewan communities;
- obtained and conducted 375 search warrants, many resulting in significant illicit drugs and weapons seizures;
- conducted and/or assisted with 69 interprovincial investigations;
- made 1048 total arrests; and
- laid 955 charges under the Criminal Code and Controlled Drugs and Substances Act.

Furthermore, these efforts led to the seizure of approximately 60 kilograms of methamphetamine, 14 kilograms of cocaine, 357 grams of fentanyl, three kilograms of other drugs, 70 pharmaceutical-style tablets, and over 120 firearms.

"Our specialized teams work hand-in-hand with front-line officers and community partners to target the individuals causing the most harm in Saskatchewan," says Insp. Michelle Ireland, the officer in charge of SERT. "Last year's results show how that coordinated, intelligence-driven enforcement is making a real impact, removing dangerous drugs, firearms, and high-risk offenders from communities throughout the province."

Lockhart: That we now adjourn at 1:05 p.m.

Some alpines for your garden

By BERNADETTE VANGOOL
Sask. Perennial Society

A plant I'm anxious to add to my garden is Lewisia longipetala 'Little Plum'. Lewisia longipetala is a rare species in the montiaceae family. It was first discovered in 1806 by Meriwether Lewis, of the Lewis and Clark expedition. Lewisia longipetalais endemic to the Sierra Nevada and found in only 20 locations, usually on north-facing scree slopes near Lake Tahoe. This subalpine bloomer prefers rocky, well-drained, gravelly soil. Another species, Lewisia cotyledon or Siskiyou Lewisia is native to Oregon and Northern California. 'Little Plum' is a chance cross of two L. longipetala x L. cotyledon discovered in Scotland. It was introduced in 2000 to the North American market by Jelitto Perennials.

'Little Plum' Lewisia forms small rosettes of narrow fleshy evergreen leaves, 15cm across. The star-like, daisy flowers are born on stalks 15cm high on plants of the same diameter. Each flower typically has eight pink-purple petals between 1 or 2 cm long. 'Little Plum' blooms in late spring and develops a deep taproot. It is best left in place once established.

For those looking for a winter project next year, perhaps try to grow these little gems from seed and plant them in a pot or in your garden in spring. Surface sow the seeds in a gritty, fast draining media. Cover them thinly with fine grit or sand and leave them at room temperature for 4 weeks. Then refrigerate them for 6 to 12 weeks. Next, bring them into a cool, bright place around 15-degree C to germinate. Germination may take over 60 days. Although mature plants are drought-tolerant, seedlings require constantly moist (but not wet) soil. Once large enough to handle, plant the seedlings in pots or into the garden. These plants are ideal for rock gardens with gritty, gravelly soil. Plant them in full sun or partial shade.

Sticking with the rock garden theme, next up is Arabis caucasica or mountain rock cress, native to the Crimea, Turkey, and Iran. In its native habitat, it is found in limestone crevices and alpine meadows. It has become naturalized in Canada and the northern United States.

The species Arabis caucasica has a white flower, but for the plant sale we are bringing in 'Pixie Cream' which has more subdued creamy-white flowers. 'Pixie Cream' forms low mounds of grey-green foliage, 15cm high and 30cm across. As this is a herb in the mustard family, the leaves are edible. The entire mound becomes blanketed with 4-petaled, creamy white, sweetly scented flowers with a yellow centre, adding colour contrast to the garden in mid to late spring. 'Pixie Cream' should be planted in full sun in gritty or sandy alkaline, well-drained soil. Allow the plants to dry out between waterings. This plant will tolerate poor soils and periods of drought, but tends to get leggy in hot weather with nude branches except for the terminal leaves. For healthier growth in summer and to encourage the spread of rhizomes, cut back the foliage after bloom. This, again, is a plant that does not like its roots disturbed. Pollinators are attracted, but deer not so much. Some years aphids can be a problem.

Last but not least, who has not been wowed by a great show of thyme in the garden? Thymus praecox 'Coccineus' forms a mat of evergreen, dark green leaves and is covered in rich mauve flowers in early summer. It thrives in full sun and is drought tolerant. It is great for rock gardens and is often used between pavers and as a ground cover to suppress weeds. An occasional shearing gives the plant a denser appearance. Red creeping thyme is native to the mountainous regions of Europe and Western Asia. Thyme has a long history in human culture. It was used for embalming in Egypt, and in Rome it was associated with courage.
